

Code of Conduct

1. Confidentiality and Discretion

Client Privacy: Our private investigators are committed to maintaining strict confidentiality. We will never disclose client information, case details, or any sensitive data to unauthorized parties.

Non-Disclosure Agreements: All clients must sign a non-disclosure agreement (NDA) before engaging our services. Violation of the NDA will result in immediate termination of the investigation contract.

2. Investigative Techniques

Surveillance: Our investigators employ state-of-the-art surveillance techniques to gather evidence. This includes discreetly following subjects, using hidden cameras, and monitoring electronic communications.

Legal Boundaries: We operate within legal boundaries. No hacking, wiretapping, or unauthorized access to electronic devices is allowed.

Trespassing: Investigators must respect property rights and refrain from trespassing on private land without permission.

3. Ethical Behavior

No Vigilantism: Our investigators are not vigilantes. We do not take the law into our own hands. Instead, we work closely with law enforcement agencies when necessary.

Avoiding Harassment: Investigators must not engage in harassment or stalking. Persistent attempts to contact complainants are strictly prohibited.

Human Rights: We adhere to the Human Rights Act 1998 (HRA) and ensure that our actions do not violate individual rights.

4. Reporting and Documentation

Thorough Reports: Investigators provide detailed reports to clients, documenting their findings, observations, and any relevant evidence.

Evidence Preservation: All evidence is handled carefully and preserved for legal purposes.

Accuracy: Investigators strive for accuracy and objectivity in their reporting.

5. Professionalism

Appearance: Our investigators maintain a professional appearance. No trench coats or fedoras—this isn't a film noir!

Training and Certification: All team members undergo rigorous training and hold valid licenses.
